BrysonForTennessee.com launches and announces board of directors

Nashville - The web site BrysonForTennessee.com was launched recently to encourage the appointment of state Senator Jim Bryson as Tennessee Secretary of State. The site which is organized by a group of Republican activists is meant to be a portal for citizens wishing to take part in the choosing of Tennessee's Secretary of State. Because this is the first time in many decades that the Republican Party will determine who serves as Secretary of State, it is vitally important that the person chosen to serve is dedicated to the conservative principles which have guided the Republican Party to its historic takeover on Capitol Hill.

In addition to providing an online voice to the movement in support of Sen. Bryson, BrysonForTennessee.com hopes to become an organization which influences our state legislature to seriously consider and embrace true conservative principles when making appointments to the state's constitutional offices. Under the direction of its Board of Directors, the organization will spear head unofficial efforts to convince state lawmakers that Sen. Bryson is the best choice for Secretary of State. Members of the Board of Directors include: Joshua Pendergrass, Jeremiah Fitzgerald, Cynthia McClard, Dustin Dunbar, and Janet Slothtower. More members are expected to be added to the board in the coming days.

"We are excited about the grassroots movement that is forming around Jim Bryson's possible appointment as Secretary of State," commented Pendergrass who has spearheaded the effort to organize BrysonForTennessee.com. "The Republican Party was able to take control of both houses of the state legislature because of the hard work grassroots efforts of committed Tennesseans. BrysonForTennessee.com is simply a continuation of that effort."

As a State Senator, it was Jim who worked tirelessly to ensure that our state was guided by true conservative principles. It was Jim, who when no one else would, chose to spread the message of the conservative values we hold dear. It was Jim's leadership, and that of others like him, that laid the foundation for the Republican take-over of both the House and Senate in November 2008.

Jim will bring that same tenacity and skill to the Secretary of State's Office. The current Secretary of State has recently allowed individuals with out of state driver's licenses to cast election ballots and bends to the calls of Governor Bredesen. It is time that we have a Secretary of State who is honest and who knows that he works for the people, not the special interests.

BrysonForTennessee.com is a privately funded and maintained web site and organization dedicated to urging and convincing the Tennessee State Legislature to appoint Senator Jim Bryson as Secretary of State. BrysonforTennessee.com is not associated with any candidate, candidate's committee, or political party.
